We left Le Choiseul about 9:30 this morning and lunched at Nantes on one of its specialties, grilled eel. Very good it was, and there were other succulent things, as well as some bottles of Anjou to prepare us for the rigors of the road.

We arrived at the Hotel Hermitage at La Baule toward six o'clock and were shown to Sybaritic chambers, of formidable expense. We quickly approached a real estate dealer and inspected a couple of deserted villas before sinking into the luxury of the Hermitage.
